

Terms and Conditions of Use

The application CableApp (hereinafter app) aims at providing assistance for the selection of the Prysmian cable that fits better to the user needs. The data elaborated and verified with the major attention and diligence must be considered only for informative purposes.

The enrollment on the application is destined to Prysmian clients, students, and professionals of electric and electronic technical areas.

Prysmian reserves the right to modify, without previous notice, the technical characteristics presented in this application.

The values of the admissible current corresponding to each method of installation are based on the Brazilian Standard NBR 5410 - Low Voltage Electric Installations (2004 Edition) - which also establishes the environmental and usage conditions for each type of cable. The choice of the appropriate cable is under responsibility of the final user.

The results obtained on the App are calculated with the higher precision that is possible, based on information, mathematical, and engineering models, in addition to knowledge and technology made available so far. The abilities mentioned above reduce but do not eliminate, the inherent randomness on the subsequent conditions that must be considered during the planning of the activities and implementation of the product.

Prysmian does not assume the responsibility for material or personal damages, direct or indirect, of any nature, stemming from third-party complaints or not, that may be related to the App usage. We recommend that you consult an adequate professional for the correct sizing of your project, being under the responsibility of the final user the selection of the type of the appropriate cable.

Prysmian does not assume the responsibility for any damage to legal persons, companies, or individual persons, regarding the App usage, including, in all aspects, the damage related to the loss of assets, benefits, and income, biological damage, damage derived from costs of reactivation, replacement, or other similar costs, direct or indirect, accidental or consequent, or even hypothetically related to the usage of the "CableApp" App, with the user assuming the full responsibility for any usage of the App and for the possible consequences that might involve civil or criminal matters."
